An Invitation to Participate

In August 2012, many thousands of professional and learned geoscientists will travel to Brisbane in Queensland to attend the 34th International Geological Congress, known to the international geological community as the 34th IGC.

The IGC is one of the world's longest running and most prestigious international scientific events. First held in Paris in 1878 to coincide with the Paris Exposition and generally held every four years, the IGC is a high profile, genuinely international gathering. The scientific sponsor of the IGC is the International Union of Geological Sciences (IUGS). The 34th IGC will also benefit from UNESCO patronage.

The Norwegian capital of Oslo hosted the most recent IGC in August 2008, attracting around 6000 delegates and some 100 exhibitors and sponsors. It had the distinction of being the largest Congress ever held in Norway. After 36 years, this major global event has returned to Australia, where the IGC was last held in Sydney in 1976.

Ranked among the top Convention Centres world-wide, the Brisbane Convention and Exhibition Centre (BCEC) will be the venue for 34th IGC. The Congress dates are 5 to 10 August 2012, with pre and post Congress events being held either side of the Congress itself. This major international event will showcase the geoscience strengths, innovations and natural wonders of Australia and the broader Oceania region.

34th IGC provides a unique opportunity for industry, corporations, research organisations, professional societies, scientific publishers, universities, consultants, service providers and government departments to engage with the global geological community and a range of exhibition opportunities have been designed to facilitate access to this major geoscientific event.

The Organising Committee welcomes the participation of your organisation in addressing the theme of 34th IGC, "Unearthing Our Past and Future - Resourcing Tomorrow " which conveys the challenge of interpreting the geological history of our planet and applying knowledge and ingenuity to create an optimum future for your families for centuries to come. We need to replace the resources consumed by our modern life style, while creating alternative more efficient mechanisms to meet the needs of society and providing new predictive capabilities for natural hazards and environmental risks.

The Congress

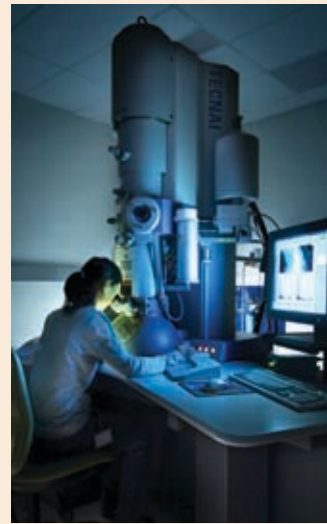

The Australian Geoscience Council (AGC), is the peak representative body for geoscientists in Australia, and is hosting the 34th IGC.

The AGC member societies include;

- Association of Applied Geochemists,
- Australian Institute of Geoscientists,
- Australian Society of Exploration Geophysicists,
- Geological Society of Australia,
- International Association of Hydrologists (Australian Chapter),
- Australian Geoscience Information Association,
- The Australasian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy and
- Petroleum Exploration Society of Australia.

These societies all strongly support the 34th IGC. The Australian Government's geological survey, Geoscience Australia, is contributing financially, providing senior staff for the organising committee and promotion of the event internationally and facilitating delivery of products for the 34th IGC. State and Northern Territory Geological Surveys and GNS Science, New Zealand, are contributing financially and organising field trips.

A wide-ranging scientific program will highlight the crucial contributions of geosciences in meeting societal needs and sustaining planet Earth – with particular emphasis on future mineral and energy supplies in a carbon-constrained world, climate change and its impacts on land and water management, mitigation of geohazards and geoscience information and standards. Major contemporary issues will be highlighted in plenary 'theme-of-the-day' sessions. Some 35-40 concurrent symposia on a wide range of topics are proposed for each of the five full days of technical sessions. Individuals will only be permitted one oral presentation and there will be a strong complementary poster program. The Congress will also provide an opportunity for our young scientists and students to engage with some of the best geoscience minds in the world. The YES (Young Earth Scientists) Network will hold its second Congress within the 34th IGC.

Delegate Profile

The IGC is the major multi-disciplinary global event for reporting on and discussing the latest geoscientific research, applications and international cooperation. The delegates will include representatives of:

- industry,
- academic institutions,
- government agencies,
- consultants,
- NGO's,
- professional and learned societies,
- YES Network.

Many delegates are involved in cutting edge research and are distinguished senior personnel representing national geosciences agencies, major resource companies as well as the extensive supporting contracting industry.

This Congress has been designed to provide numerous major streams of high industry relevance, which will flow from the start of the IGC through to the final day, and attract substantial participation from the energy, minerals, engineering and related fields of geoscience.
